Legislative UPDATE

October 17, 2014
Number 37

Voter ID Law Back in Play

The last edition of the Legislative Update reported that a United States district judge in Corpus Christi struck down the Texas voter ID law. The law, which was in effect until the judge issued her 147-page opinion, has been the subject of continuing legal challenges.

The Texas attorney general quickly moved to appeal the decision. Last Tuesday, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals “stayed” the district court’s opinion. The opinion cites the possibility of voter confusion by making the change so close the November elections. The stay means that the law, which requires a voter to present photo identification at the polling place, remains in effect.

It is likely that the latest opinion will be appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court. League staff will monitor and report on the case as it develops. Texas cities preparing for November elections should consult with their city attorney about the latest opinion immediately.

Single Sticker Vehicle Registration and Inspection Program Could Affect City Vehicles

The single sticker vehicle registration and inspection program, also known as “Two Steps, One Sticker,” was adopted by the Texas legislature in 2013. It will go into effect on March 1, 2015. As the name suggests, the program will streamline the vehicle inspection and registration process so that Texas drivers only need to display one sticker on their car windshields to demonstrate proof of vehicle inspection and registration.

The new program may have an impact on city vehicles and fleets. Under the current and outgoing system, most city vehicles must be inspected annually but are generally exempt from annual registration requirements. Under the new single sticker system, city vehicles will continue to be exempt from registration fees, but cities will need to renew registrations after an annual inspection like all other non-exempt vehicles in order to receive the combined inspection and registration sticker.

The Texas Department of Motor Vehicles has scheduled webinars designed to educate state and local government officials about the impact of the new program on government-owned vehicles, and to give participants the opportunity to ask questions about its implementation:

Pension Review Board Continues to Implement House Bill 13 Training Requirements

The Pension Review Board, pursuant to H.B. 13 from the 2013 session, recently proposed new reporting requirement rules for public retirement systems' pension administrators and trustees. The Board recently adopted rules that require seven hours of training in the first year an individual holds the position and four hours each year thereafter. The proposed reporting requirement rules would require each public retirement system to inform the Board twice a year about its compliance with the training requirement. The Pension Review Board has additional information about these new training requirements on its website at: <http://www.prb.state.tx.us/resource-center/trustees-administrators/educational-training-program/>. ## Federal Court Strikes Down Voter ID Law

Last night, a United States district judge in Corpus Christi struck down the Texas voter ID law. The law, which was in effect until the judge issued her 147-page opinion, has been the subject of continuing legal challenges.

An initial hurdle to enforcing the law was the “preclearance” requirement in the federal Voting Rights Act. Preclearance, which was required for any law that affected voting, simply meant that the U.S. Department of Justice or a federal court had to approve the law as not having a racially discriminatory purpose. While the Texas law was being reviewed, the preclearance requirement was struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court. That action allowed the law to go into effect.

The separate Corpus Christi lawsuit had been pending for some time. After hearings and evidence, the court concluded that the law: (1) creates an unconstitutional burden on the right to vote; (2) has an impermissible discriminatory effect against Hispanics and African-Americans; and (3) was imposed with an unconstitutional discriminatory purpose. The court further concluded that the law constitutes an unconstitutional poll tax. Those conclusions were based on both provisions of the Voting Rights Act that remain in effect after the preclearance requirement was struck down and the U.S. Constitution.

Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act prohibits a state from imposing a voting qualification, prerequisite to voting, or standard, practice, or procedure that “results in a denial or abridgment of the right of any citizen of the United States to vote on account of race, color, or language minority status.” The court concluded that the law violates this provision because, “based on the totality of the circumstances, it is shown that the political processes leading to nomination or election in the State or political subdivision are not equally open to participation by members of a [protected class] in that its members have less opportunity than other members of the electorate to participate in the political process and to elect representatives of their choice.” In other words, the court believes that the law does not disproportionately impact African-Americans and Hispanics by mere chance. Rather, it does so by its “interaction with the vestiges of past and current racial discrimination.” As such, the law violates the Voting Rights Act as well as the U.S. Constitution.

In addition, the 24th Amendment provides that a citizen’s right to vote in a federal election may not be “denied or abridged by the United States or any State by reason of failure to pay any poll tax or other tax.” Pursuant to the Texas law, any individual wishing to vote in person must procure one of seven forms of approved photo ID if he or she currently lacks such identification. Individuals must pay an application fee in order to obtain any of the required forms of ID, except for the Election Identification Card (EIC). An EIC, issued by the Department of Public Safety, must be issued free of charge. But in order to receive an EIC, an applicant must provide one of several supporting documents, the cheapest of which is a birth certificate. If the applicant does not have a birth certificate, it must be purchased at a minimum fee of $2.00 in Texas. Based on that information, the court concluded that the law imposes a poll tax.

The court ultimately entered a permanent and final injunction against enforcement of the Texas voter ID law. Under the injunction, “Texas shall return to enforcing the voter identification requirements for in-person voting in effect immediately prior to the enactment and implementation of [the law].”

The Texas attorney general has already indicated he will appeal the court’s decision. League staff will monitor and report on the case as it develops. Texas cities preparing for November elections should consult with their city attorney about the decision immediately. The text of the opinion is available at <http://electionlawblog.org/wp-content/uploads/20141009-TXID-Opinion.pdf>.

West Fertilizer Testimony Continues to Miss the Point

Earlier this week, the House Committee on Homeland Security and Public Safety once again considered how to address the fertilizer plant explosion in the City of West. Unfortunately, some state lawmakers and committee witnesses continue to approach the tragic fertilizer plant explosion from the perspective of increased emergency training for local government personnel and officials. They do so in spite of testimony from the State Fire Marshal’s Office at a previous hearing that storing the fertilizer in flammable wooden bins was likely the root cause of the explosion.

Statewide, 50 of 96 similar fertilizer facilities already use metal or concrete instead of wood. The facilities do so without any additional prodding from the state. Industry representatives continue, however, to oppose a mandate to that effect for the remaining 46 businesses or any rules that are based on input from cities, counties, or anyone other than the fertilizer industry.

Why won’t the legislature simply mandate non-flammable bins, at a cost of thousands of dollars, as opposed to potentially millions in cost for extra training for volunteer officials across the state? Increased emergency training likely wouldn’t have prevented the explosion in West, which caused additional millions of dollars in property damage. Isn't a few thousand dollars to prevent fertilizer explosions altogether a much better allocation of resources than millions on training and millions more in property loss?

The answer isn't difficult. At the Texas Capitol, business interests often trump local government and taxpayer interests. However, the chairman of the committee – Joe Pickett (D, El Paso) – appears to truly want increased standards for the fertilizer industry. He asked each witness at the hearing what they needed to do their jobs more effectively. Some county officials mentioned that state funding for voluntary training and equipment would help their emergency management responses.

In response to the request for state financial assistance, one legislator chided the county official, stating that “I just want to hear that we [the county] want to partner with you [the state] to make this [emergency management] a priority and will you help us...not will you give us.” The county official responded that his county has made emergency management a priority, that there are now two new emergency services districts in his county, and that he is sensitive to the rise in property taxes. Because of those things, he believes the state should help with training costs.

During the 2015 legislative session, legislation requiring cities to spend extra tax dollars to prepare for avoidable disasters caused by a few negligent actors will likely be filed. The city response to such legislation should be this: let's instead make the 46 wooden-bin facility owners move their fertilizer to metal or concrete, as a majority of their colleagues have already done.

One More Time: Cities Shouldn't Adopt Resolutions in Support of State Constitutional Amendments

At the November 4, 2014, general election, Texas voters will be asked to approve or reject an amendment to the Texas Constitution to dedicate certain state oil and gas revenue to transportation (in lieu of the funds going to the state's “Rainy Day Fund”). The legislature passed the measure in 2013, and it will appear on the ballot as “Proposition 1.”

Although many city officials are in favor of the proposition, a city council is prohibited by Election Code section 255.003 from adopting a resolution in support of it. Doing so could subject city officials to criminal penalties and civil fines.

Section 255.003 provides that “[a]n officer or employee of a political subdivision may not knowingly spend or authorize the spending of public funds for political advertising.” “Spending” of public funds is interpreted by the Texas Ethics Commission to include the use of political subdivision employees' work time, the use of existing political subdivision equipment, and the use of facilities maintained by a political subdivision. “Political advertising” is defined as a communication supporting or opposing a measure that “appears...in a...written communication.”

The Texas Ethics Commission has also indicated that, in certain situations, comments by city council members at a recorded public meeting that is broadcast over a public access channel could give rise to a violation of section 255.003. According to Ethics Advisory Opinion No. 456 (2004), “we can imagine a situation in which one or more city council members might arrange a discussion of a matter not pending before the city council with the hope that broadcasts of the discussion would influence the outcome of an election [and thus, rise to a violation of Section 255.003].”

At a minimum, the adoption of a resolution by a city council would require an employee to document the subject of and final vote on the resolution in the official minutes or recording of the meeting at which the resolution is considered. In this way the adoption of either an oral or written resolution would require a city employee’s work time and equipment and thus, constitutes a spending of public funds. Moreover, such resolutions are often posted on a city’s website either as stand alone documents or as part of the minutes.

While there appears to be no opinion or case directly on point, a written resolution in support of Prop 1 likely constitutes prohibited political advertising. The city officials who are responsible for adopting such a resolution could be committing a Class A misdemeanor. In addition, the Ethics Commission has authority to impose fines for violations of section 255.003. Finally, the Ethics Commission has also indicated that action taken in violation of section 255.003 may constitute a violation of Penal Code section 39.02, which prohibits government resources from being used for campaign purposes.

All of the above indicates that a city council is prohibited from adopting a resolution in support of Proposition 1. That is why the League’s legal department advises cities against adopting one. Of course, nothing prohibits an elected official – on his or her own time and not using public funds – from advocating for or against passage.

Local Officials Briefed on Ebola Threat

Earlier this week, President Barack Obama, Secretary of Homeland Security Jeh Johnson, Secretary of Health and Human Services Sylvia Burwell, and Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) officials conducted a conference call with state and local elected officials to update them on White House efforts to combat Ebola.

During the call, President Obama made it clear that Ebola is a national security priority, and that White House officials are working diligently to stop the outbreak. In an interconnected world, infectious disease can be spread across borders, but the chance of a large-scale outbreak in the United States remains extremely low.

The President thanked Dallas Mayor Mike Rawlings and Dallas County Judge Clay Jenkins for working closely with CDC and the White House during the recent diagnosis and care of Ebola patient Thomas Duncan in Dallas, who passed away Wednesday morning.

CDC officials reiterated that Ebola is not an airborne disease. Additionally, they stated that no additional cases or symptoms have been detected among 10 definite and 38 possible contacts of Thomas Duncan. CDC and local officials will continue to monitor these individuals another two weeks until the end of the 21-day exposure period.

All of the individuals on the call reiterated that the U.S. has the best doctors in the world. Federal officials are confident that – if federal, state, and local officials work together – operating with an appropriate sense of urgency will prevent an Ebola outbreak. Local authorities in West Africa are screening passengers leaving airports in the infected countries, which includes taking passengers’ temperature. Those officials have the authority to issue “do not board” orders if they suspect a passenger is potentially infected. Beginning this weekend, U.S. officials will begin additional screening measures at the major U.S. airports that receive most West African visitors.

Also earlier this week, Texas Health and Human Services Executive Director Dr. Kyle Janek testified before Texas legislative committees in both the House and Senate. Dr. Janek testified that the people of Texas should be confident that the state is well-prepared to control the Ebola threat.

League Staff will continue to work with local, state, and federal officials to disseminate information on any new Ebola-related developments.

EPA Listening Sessions: Low Interest Loans for Water Infrastructure

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is hosting a series of listening sessions on the Water Infrastructure Finance and Innovation Act. The Act creates a five-year pilot program to provide low-interest loans and loan guarantees for large water and wastewater-related infrastructure projects of at least $20 million. Smaller projects serving fewer than 25,000 people will be eligible if the cost of the project surpasses $5 million.

At the upcoming listening sessions, the EPA will give an overview of the Act, provide a summary of financial assistance options and terms, and detail the status of agency efforts to get the program up and running.

Four sessions have been scheduled, including one in Dallas on October 30, 2014. To register, go to [https://docs.google.com/forms/d/1vpB\_mTgFO2GxNZTiyUXOsZiuNhPbFyCLIPkNMgkxt7A/v
